

A very little if any; he simply told me that he had been out there that day to identify him; he said he identified Mr. Hall but didn't look at Mrs. Mills.

Q He didn't comment to you on the fact that they had been found together?

A No, he did not.

Q Now, do you remember anything further in the conversation with Mrs. Hall that Saturday afternoon?

A I don't remember anything further in regard to talking about the case in any way at all.

Q Well, Mr. Stevens, as near as you can describe it now, what was your state of mind or feeling when you learned that Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills were found dead together?

A Well, I was shaking like a leaf there in the station at Monmouth Junction; that was the first intimation I heard of it, of what it was, and I was awfully shaky. Well, I just couldn't get it through my mind at all, the cause of it all.

BY MR. STUDER:

Q Were you incensed?

A Why, in what way do you mean incensed? Was I crazy to find out who did it or to--
